

“The discovery of a good wine is increasingly better for mankind than the discovery of a new star.”

Leonardo da Vinci

The Black Rooster has a legendary past.

Legend has it that in medieval times, the Republics of Firenze and Siena were bitter enemies, and the Chianti territory was constantly fought over in the city-states’ quest for dominance. To end the dispute, it was agreed that two knights would arise at dawn, signaled by rooster crow, to depart from their respective cities and decide the boundary based on where they met. The Florentines chose a black rooster, and the Sieneese chose a white one.

On the fated day, the black rooster began to crow before dawn, and the Florentine knight set off long before the Sieneese knight had awoken. With such a big head start, the knights met at Fonterutoli – just 12 kilometers from the Sieneese’s starting point. And so, nearly all of Chianti was brought into the Republic of Firenze, and the black rooster became a lasting symbol of the territory.
